MENDELL, REINHART BREAK WORLD'S RECORD

FLY 246 HOURS,
43 MINUTES
AND 30 SECONDS

DIRECT CAUSE OF DESCENT WAS GATHERING OF REFUSE IN TAIL GROUP

AS CONDITION GREW "ANGEL-ENO" BECAME WOBBLY AND HARD TO CONTROL

Los Angeles, July 13.—(U.P.)—Two adventurous young men awoke from well-deserved slumber here today and stepped from their suites in one of the city's best hotels to accept the adulation paid to heroes of the air.

Loren Mendell and R. B. "Pete" Reinhart, changed from greasy flying to clean linens, and, smooth-faced after the removal of ten days' growth of beard, presented a much different picture than yesterday at 2:16 P. M. when they crawled from their biplane Angeleno after a world-record endurance sustained flight of 246 hours, 43 minutes and 30 seconds.

Telegrams of congratulations, offers of movie and stage contracts, invitations to endorse sundry merchandise for cash, and other problems confronted Mendell, Reinhart and their managers.

It's a big job," A. E. McManus, co-manager of the flight with William G. McAduo, Jr., said. "It looks like these two men belong to the public for weeks."

According to McManus and the pilots, the direct cause of the sudden descent of the Angeleno during its 37th refueling at 1500 feet was the gathering of refuse in the tail group of the plane.

"Examination showed that paper and other refuse tossed out of the plane gathered in the tail group," McManus said, "and as this condition grew the Angeleno became wobbly and hard to control."

During the last refueling the supply plane gained altitude slowly and the draught of its propeller blew a cowl hood of the Angeleno back into the stabilizer of the plane. This increased the uncertainty of steering and a successful contact appeared impossible so Mendell dove for the landing field.

"An examination showed the Wright whirlwind engine would have been good for 150 hours more and Mendell and Reinhart were far from complete exhaustion," McManus said. "This is true despite the fact that this flight covered approximately 21,000 miles of flying."

Airport figures show that the Angeleno traveled 85 miles per hour and would have circled the globe. Airmen place importance in this fact because for the first time in history a plane has been sustained in flight long enough to have gone around the earth.

Mendell and Reinhart retired at 9:30 last night after a "victory banquet" in their suits and brief speeches over the radio over a nation-wide hook-up.

Orders were posted that the new air heroes were not to be disturbed under any circumstances during the night. Mendell and Reinhart concurred in this decree.

"Boy, that meal was a wow," Mendell declared, "but I think clean sheets look even better."

The curly-headed pilot appeared to have lost all desire for the "celebration and whoopee" he said he claimed when he climbed out of the Angeleno.

Reinhart, who maintained from the minute he stepped out on solid ground "that a good sleep will do me a lot of good," did not change his stand and retired as soon as it was possible to break away from pressing duties and admiring friends.

Both fliers were deaf when they landed and it was several hours before their hearing reached a degree approaching normal.

Mendell said the first three days and nights were the hardest.

"We were sick from gasoline fumes, weary from fighting fog and unable to sleep due to the roar of the motor," he said. "Then suddenly we became acclimated. We were unable to hear the motor because we were deaf. As a result we got to sleep and sleep is one of the most important things on an endurance flight."

Mrs. Ila Reinhart, 21, pretty brunette wife of "Pete," surrendered her husband to his flight associates last night with a promise to "see you soon."

She was at the airport and joyfully embraced Pete when he tumbled out of his ship. She stayed with him at the hospital and then rode to Los Angeles, where they parted.

Mrs. Reinhart denied rumors they were estranged.

One of Reinhart's first desires, he said, is to go to Oregon and see his mother. He wired her as soon as he landed.

HUTCHINSON, KANSAS, UNDER MARTIAL LAW

2,000 HOMES INUNDED BY THE WORST FLOOD CITY EXPERI-ENCED IN 26 YEARS

SITUATION SERIOUS TODAY AND PROPERTY LOSS WILL BE ENORMOUS

Hutchinson, Kansas, July 13.—(U.P.)—Hutchinson was under martial law today with the 130th field artillery patrolling more than 2,000 homes inundated by the worst flood this city has experienced in 26 years.

Hutchinson's situation was serious today and property loss will be enormous. Already the flood has claimed the lives of two persons, and fear was expressed that a third injured would not recover.

Traffic was at a standstill as a twenty mile an hour current, waist deep in some of the main streets, swept through the city.

I. E. French, Hutchinson political leader, was missing today and it was feared he had been drowned as he attempted to cross flooded Cow creek whose waters are sweeping the city.

Roberta Orange, 11, was drowned on Wednesday while wading in shallow flood water.

Mrs. Betty Ringler was not expected to recover from injuries suffered when an improvised gas stove exploded. Her home was inundated and she was preparing food for her family in a temporary tent shelter.

Hutchinson, Kansas, July 13.—With 2,000 homes swept by a 20 miles an hour current from the flooded Cow creek, Hutchinson early today was placed under partial martial law as thousands were rendered homeless.

The condition was described as acute as news of the flood filtered from portions of the stricken city. The district inundated many of Hutchinson's choicest homes.

HEIR TO CUDAHY MILLIONS JAILED

Hollywood, Calif., July 13.—(U.P.)—After spending thirty hours in jail on a felony charge of driving while intoxicated Michael J. F. Cudahy, 21-year-old heir to the Cudahy packing house fortune, was scheduled to be arraigned today.

Cudahy took his enforced detention in the Hollywood jail as something of a lark, according to police. Adele Evansen, actress, to whom he was married a week ago, spent most of yesterday afternoon with him.

He was arrested by police while allegedly attempting to drive away after crashing into another machine early Friday morning.

Los Angeles, Calif., July 13.—(U.P.)—Michael Cudahy, 21-year-old scion of the multimillionaire meat packing family, today was charged with driving while intoxicated in a complaint issued by Deputy District Attorney Jess Scrampton.

Detective Lieut. L. E. Taylor of the Hollywood division signed the complaint under which it was expected Cudahy would be arraigned in municipal court.

2 Huge Airplanes Roar From Paris for First Air Race Attempted Across North Atlantic

LEAVE LE BOURGET FIELD IN THE MISTS OF EARLY MORNING

MARSHAL PILSUDSKI CARRYING
2 POLISH FLIERS, IS FIRST TO GET AWAY

QUESTION MARK, MANNED BY 2
FRENCHMEN, TAKES OFF 42
MINUTES LATER

By RICHARD D. McMILLAN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Paris, July 13.—Two huge airplanes roared out of Le Bourget Field in the heavy mists of approaching dawn today for the first air race ever attempted across the hazardous North Atlantic from Paris to New York.

The Marshal Pilsudski, carrying two daring Polish fliers, was the first to get away after a perfect take-off at 4:45 A. M. (10:45 P. M. Friday EST). The Question Mark, manned by two Frenchmen who braved the ban of the French government against trans-Atlantic flights, took off 42 minutes afterwards, at 5:27 A. M. (11:27 P. M. Friday EST).

In the huge Polish plane are Louis Idzikowski and Icaimir Kubala, veterans of the war and aviators of wide experience. They made an attempt to cross the Atlantic last August, but were forced down.

The Question Mark, a smaller plane which had been secretly prepared for the flight for the last two months, was flown by two of France's best known aviators, Dieudonne Costes, who already has a South Atlantic flight to his credit, and Maurice Bellonte.

The start of the planes was sudden and quite unexpected; only a few newspapermen and photographers being on hand. Bellonte's English wife was at the field to bid her husband good-bye.

What preparations Costes and his partner had made were for the ostensible purpose, in view of the French ban on trans-Atlantic flights, of flying to Tokyo. A few moments before the take-off, however, when Costes was asked if he really was going to Tokyo, he said:

"No, New York."

Costes left a letter for the air ministry, reading:

"We are leaving for a prohibited destination. We place the responsibility on no one."

Idzikowski, in an exclusive interview with the United Press just before his take-off, said he was absolutely confident of reaching New York.

The Polish flier said he would be satisfied as long as he landed somewhere in the United States, although

DENIES THREAT OF RETALIATORY TARIFF ON AMERICAN WHEAT

Washington, July 13.—(U.P.)—Secretary of State Stimson today denied reports that Canada or any other section of the British kingdom had threatened a retaliatory tariff on American wheat, as reported in congressional circles here.

Canadian Minister Massey in his conversation with Stimson on the subject of tariff has made no protest "or threat," Stimson said in a formal statement.

The denial was provoked by widely published reports that the Canadian minister had protested against proposed higher American tariffs on timber shingles, and feeder cattle and intimidated the British government might retaliate by imposing a tariff on American wheat exported to all countries.

New York City was his chief objective, he said:

"We really have no definite destination. We only wish to blaze the trail to somewhere in the United States. We have every confidence that our single motor plane will get us across the Atlantic."

Idzikowski declared that his failure on the previous attempt to cross the Atlantic did not intimidate him.

"Our motto on this trip is 'Sink or Swim,'" Idzikowski added. "Anything to get across."

The two planes were prepared and fueled side by side. The Marshal Pilsudski was the first to be ready and was standing outside its hangar, ready for the dash, as the Question Mark was being put in condition for the flight by two score of workers.

The provisions loaded on the Question Mark consisted of several bottles of water, packages of biscuits, dried meat, dried preserves and a quantity of pemmican.

Neither crew was willing to tell the course of the flight of its plane, but it was taken for granted that they would cut out by the Azores, a route which has come to be regarded as the most advantageous.

The French plane was equipped with a radio apparatus, but the huge Polish plane was not. The Aniot biplane in which the Poles started their flight carried a greater supply of fuel. It had nearly 1,500 gallons aboard while still in the process of being loaded.

The Question Mark carried 1,400 gallons.

The air ministry, when informed of the flights, displayed no interest in the trans-Atlantic phase of the French flight. The officials said they under-

FEDERAL DRY AGENTS HAVE CIRCUS OF OWN

St. Paul, July 13.—(U.P.)—Federal dry agents had a little circus of their own under a bootlegger's "big top" near Harding, Friday, Maurice Silverman, group enforcement chief, revealed today.

All of the apparatus which the raiders confiscated, together with 300 gallons of "Minnesota 13" and 2,000 gallons of mash, was under a tent in the Morrison county woods, bordering Platt lake. They also confiscated a new automobile.

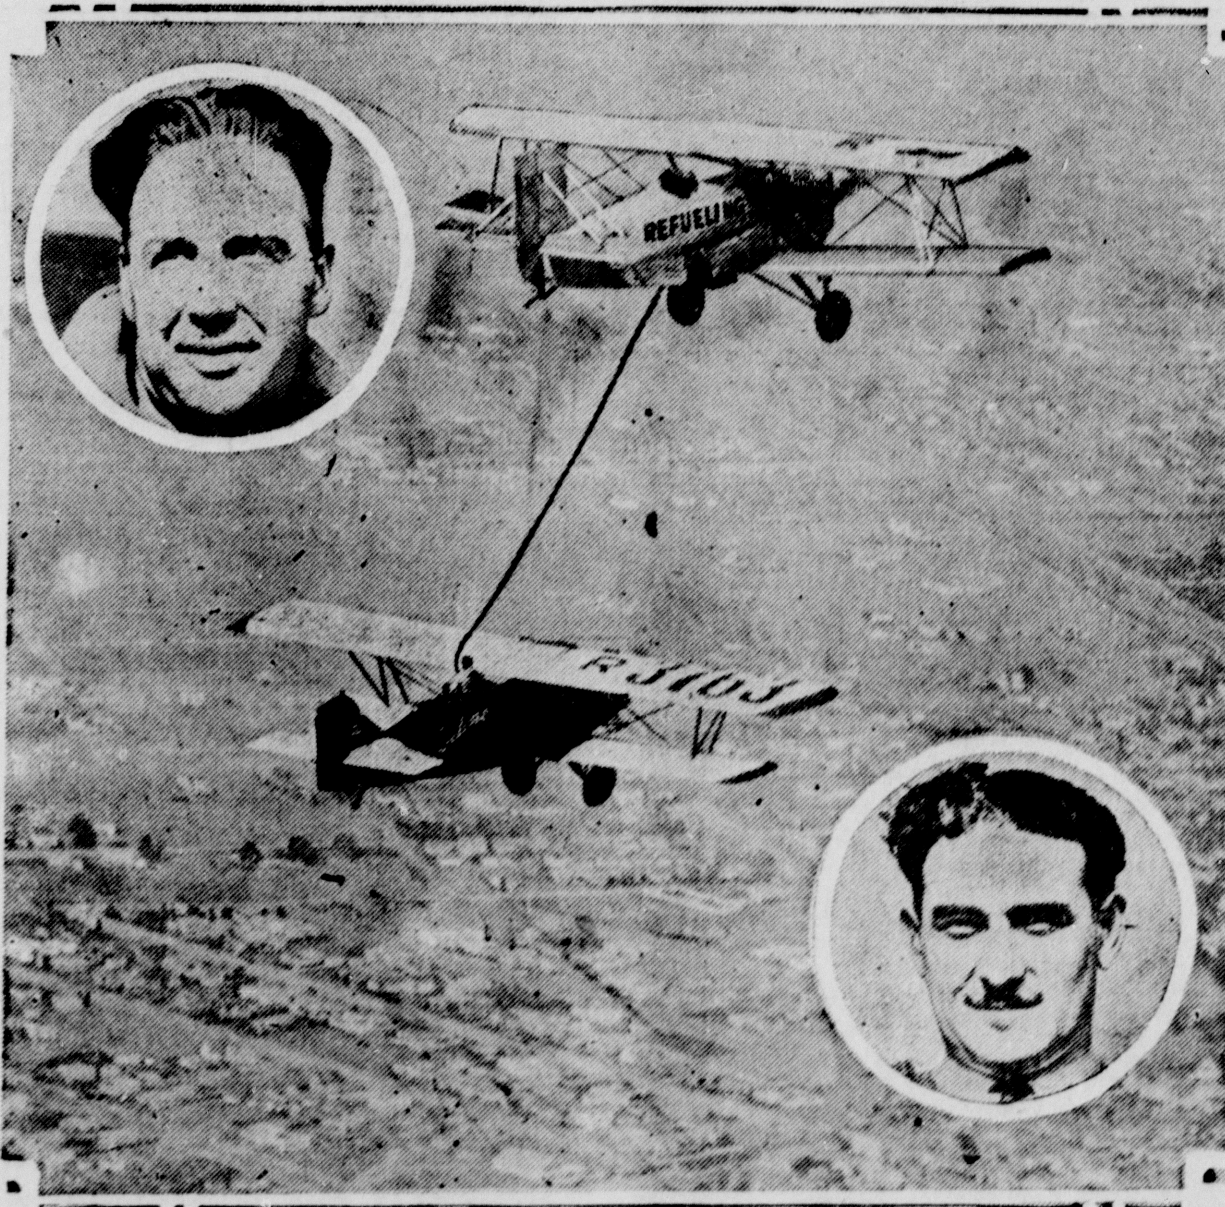

Those arrested were Alex Pavlae, Ray Zak and Walter Wistrak, all of Holdingford.

In St. Paul agents arrested Agnes Steffels, 694 Western Ave. N., as she was delivering a cargo of moonshine to that address, and Samuel Arbuckle, proprietor of an alleged drinking club at 694 University Ave.

She is a graduate of the Brainerd high school and the Minneapolis Business School, and is employed at the Northern Pacific railway offices here.

FAHY TO COMPETE FOR HAWK'S TITLE

Los Angeles, July 13.—(U.P.)—One minute after midnight tonight the Black Hornet monoplane of Herbert J. Fahy will roar east from the Los Angeles Metropolitan airport in its assault on Captain Hawk's trans-continental round-trip record.

Its speed tests complete, Fahy's plane was fueled this morning with 600 gallons of gasoline and 26 gallons of oil to supply its powerful Hornet motor over the 5,012 mile air course.

Fahy, present solo endurance record holder, will attempt to lower Hawk's 36 hour and 48 minute record to an even 32 hours for the round trip. With an hour's stop for refueling in New York, he should land here again by 9:30 a. m. Monday.

Firemen and volunteer university students worked in shifts pumping air into the paralyzed lungs of the youth whose present condition was caused by an injury during a basketball game in May. Physicians feared the youth had little chance of life.

Young Wessel was brought here late Wednesday and an operation was performed on his spine in the hope the paralysis would be halted if not cured. The still conscious boy is paralyzed from his neck down.

THAT'S WHAT THEY ARE!

Little Clarice's French tutor had been endeavoring to teach her that there are only two genders in the French language—masculine and feminine. Next day, desirous of learning if the child had remembered, she asked, "How many genders are there in French?"

"Two," came the quick response. Much gratified, the tutor then asked, "And what are they?"

After a moment's reflection, Clarice replied, "Masculine and genuine."

BRAINERD
25 YEARS AGO

From the Daily Dispatch

July 13, 1904

Their was an important meeting of the officers and stockholders of the Big Jewel Mining Company last night in the office of J. R. Smith, the following being present: James Cullen, J. R. Smith, Mrs. George Forsyth, Fred Hoffman, Ed McKay, E. K. Woodin and Dr. Jamieson.

Nick Lauer has organized a dancing class at Baker's hall which meets on every Monday evening.

Mrs. P. M. Reilly and Miss Deil Reilly left for Fargo this afternoon where they will meet P. M. Reilly who is en route east to attend the grand lodge convention of the Elks.

Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Clark left for Minneapolis this afternoon where they will be present this evening at a dinner to be given at the West Hotel in honor of Cardinal Satolli.

The Brainerd first baseball team will play at Little Falls on Sunday and an excursion train is being arranged for.

The game promises to be a good one. The wrestling match which was pulled off at Gardner hall last night between Felky of Aitkin and Young Tripp, was one of the most interesting affairs in the sporting line for some time. Felky got the best of young Tripp, taking the last three out of four falls.

Dr. R. R. Beise, who went to Mappleton yesterday on a business trip, will return home this evening.

Hotel in a Mountain

One of the most extraordinary hotels in the world is on the Jungfrau. It is a shoulder just below the crest of this Swiss giant, and was excavated rather than built, as most of the structure, which has five stories, is actually within the mountain. Everything in the hotel is worked by electricity, and access is gained by a tunnel from the terminal station of the Jungfrau railway.

When There Is Illness

A help to the housewife is to have a compartment in her recipe file labeled "Sickness" and in this place recipes that would be beneficial to sick people. It is a joy to go to this file when worried about the youngsters and find a recipe that just solves the problem.

Getting Ahead

Improve yourself just as religiously as you feed yourself. Don't be afraid that by so doing you will benefit some one else. To increase the value of your services to yourself you must first increase your value to others.—Grit.

CHRIST FOR ALL—ALL FOR CHRIST

The Word of God

The word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path.—Psalm 119: 105

God or Mammom—No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammom.—Matthew 6:24.

Prayer:
"My Jesus as Thou wilt!
O may Thy will be mine."

SERVICES in the CHURCHES

Beginning of Christ's Ministry

Matthew 4:7. From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.

Mark 4:26-29. And He said, So is the kingdom of God, as if a man should cast seed into the ground; 27. And should sleep, and rise night and day, and the seed should spring and grow up, he knoweth not how. 28. For the earth bringeth forth fruit of herself; first the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear. 29. But when the fruit is brought forth, immediately he putteth in the sickle, because the harvest is come.

Luke 17:21. Neither shall they say, Lo here! or, lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is with you.

PRAYER: Enable us, O Lord, to turn from all sin to Thee with full purpose of and endeavor after new obedience.

From the grimy cab of a locomotive to the stately radio studios of New York, Howard Melaney, the "Singing Fireman of the Northern Pacific Railway," has climbed in little more than two years. He was an obscure locomotive fireman on the North Coast Limited when his lyric tenor voice was discovered. Today, he has sung at studios of 85 American and Canadian radio stations, and his voice has been carried into homes throughout the continent. He frequently appears also in concert. This picture shows Mr. Melaney firing a locomotive and also as he appears before his audiences of today. Brainerd people and their guests on Saturday, July 20, will have an opportunity to hear this international star when he sings at the Big Air Meet.

stood Costes was preparing for a flight to Tokio. Aside from that there were no official comments.

Before the Polish fliers started, the United Press reporter was the last to shake their hands, wishing them luck. As the plane started Kubala shouted:

"This ground is historic as it was here that Lindbergh landed. We hope to make other land historic in the United States."

Idzikowski said he hoped they would be able to make their trip to New York or some other point in the United States in 45 hours.

LeBourget Airdrome, Paris, July 13.—The LeBourget airdrome radio station received a dispatch at 9:30 A. M. today (3:30 A. M. EST) which said that the fishing boat Mouette had sighted a red airplane resembling the plane used by Dieudonne Costes about 30 miles northwest of Cape Ferret. This report places the Question Mark well out in the Bay of Biscay, headed for the open ocean.

New York, July 13.—The destination of the Costes-Bellonte flight in the French monoplane Question Mark is Roosevelt Field, L. I. Rene Rancover, manager of the flight, said today.

Rancover arrived in New York two days ago on the liner Paris.

"They will arrive Sunday afternoon unquestionably," Rancover said. He disclosed the Question Mark's course would be by way of the Azores, Halifax and south to New York.

Paris, July 13.—Barring mishap the Polish plane Marshal Pilsudski and the French plane Question Mark were believed far toward their goal today in a race from LeBourget Field, France, to New York.

Ignoring the unlucky implication of the 13th, they took off around dawn, the faster French plane speeding down the runway 42 minutes behind its Polish rival.

The British ship Esperance reported to the French ministry of marine it had sighted the red body of the Question Mark sailing overhead at 7:18 A. M. EST at about the 20th degree of longitude or more than half the distance from the Spanish coast to the Azores.

Several hours earlier, Maurice Bellonte aboard the Question Mark had radioed his wife in Paris that all was well. He at that time was over Santander, Spain.

No word was heard from the Polish plane, which carried a radio-telephone believed not in working condition.

Camp Clearwater, July 12.—Two interesting littenball games were played today. This afternoon the boys from Brainerd accepted the challenge from the Wadena scouts. Batteries for Brainerd were Miller, Doepke and Richards; for Wadena, Smith, Davis, C. Johnson and Hipple. The score indicated that the game was very one-sided. Wadena won 22 to 1. However a great deal of interest was shown. Wadena has now delivered a challenge to the officers, and it is expected that a game will be played as a feature of the Field Day exercises on Saturday.

Cubins one and five played in the semi-finals this evening. Doepke and Anderson were battered for cabin one; Schupt and Frazer, for cabin five. The score was 7-3 in favor of cabin one. Cubins four and one play in the finals this afternoon.

We wish to feature two brave scouts, Hoffoss and Wetzel. They dove off the diving board in full dress, not to rescue some damsel in distress, but to win a wager. Wetzel is the richer by 25 cents, and Hoffoss, by 35 cents, as a result of their audacity. Any more fellows who want to earn money in this way apply to certain potential promoters in camp.

As per schedule cabin five provided the evening camp fire program. Harold Williams was in charge. The program was as follows:

Harmonica selections—S. C. Bakken. Debate—Bakken Brothers. Story—C. P. Bakken. Jokes—Bob Lemke. Ghost story—Arden Miller. Marshmallow roast—Scouts.

The mosquitoes are getting worse at camp, and it is expected that the Court of Honor ceremonies will be held indoors tomorrow night. There will also be a short program. The officers are hoping that they may escape from

Forest or Farm Land

PROPOSAL of the Weyerhaeuser Lumber company to set aside 172,000 acres of its holdings in St. Louis county as an auxiliary forest under the new state yield tax law has encountered the fear that lands suitable for agriculture may be bottled up in a timber reserve, says the St. Paul Dispatch.

The argument was presented to the St. Louis Board of County Commissioners, which is considering the company's application, and is stated by the Duluth Herald as follows:

The county board above all should consider the character of this land, and should go carefully lest the present sudden enthusiasm for forestry after long and fatal neglect should result in absorbing into public and private forest projects land that will presently be needed for farming.

So far as the present plan is concerned, the basis for such fears is slight. The lands are not now needed for agricultural purposes. If they were, a ready market for them would exist. The expense and risks of forestry on a tract salable at immediate, substantial profit would be prohibitive, particularly when plenty of other lands are to be had for bargain prices near at hand. The company's willingness to devote the tract to forestry is good evidence that sale for farms is not possible now.

Of course, it is possible that this situation may change. Just now, abandonment of marginal farm lands, or lands of doubtful agricultural value, is a nation-wide problem. Northern Minnesota is littered with empty cabins of farmers who quit because they could not make a living on soil which was chiefly suitable for growing trees. The latest reports of the Minnesota State Tax commission show 695,800 acres of tax delinquent lands in St. Louis county alone. The problem now in Minnesota and in many other states is to check this abandonment, and to get tax forfeited areas back on the tax rolls. Forestry is a method commonly proposed, and it is deliberately offered in St. Louis county by the lumber company. The prospect is that if the plan is rejected these lands, too, will be abandoned to the tax collector.

But there is the possibility that the need for agricultural developments, now not pressing, may become important. It is probable that Duluth, with the St. Lawrence waterway making it an ocean port, some day will be a far larger city and market than at present. Many new farms may be required close at hand to supply a greater Duluth's wants. The city naturally wishes assurance that there will be no obstacles in the way of this prospective cultivation in its hinterland.

The auxiliary forest should present none. Enormous areas as good or better will remain outside its boundaries. Moreover, the company's contract with the state can be written to provide that lands needed for agriculture may be withdrawn from the forest, replaced on the old tax basis and sold, with full reimbursement to the county for all deferred tax levies. In this way every future contingency could be provided for in advance. The problem does not seem to present any real reason why the state or St. Louis county should block the only large private reforestation project thus far attempted in Minnesota.

Remodeling One's Home

THERE is a general movement on way encouraging remodeling old fashioned homes. We are glad to see this take hold in Brainerd. It means much to the householder as well as to the city at large.

Homes go out of fashion just like clothes and automobiles, etc. Bringing them up to date means taking advantage of improved construction, re-arrangement of rooms, changes in exterior and interior, all tending to bring greater comfort and convenience to the home owner and also improving the general tone of a residence district.

Under new plans employed some of the lumber companies bring all their experience and aid to foster this movement which is of such material benefit to a householder.

Grade Crossing Peril

THE frightful accident yesterday by which the lives of four people were snuffed out instantly without warning can be laid to the grade crossing evil.

This crossing was not considered an especially dangerous one, as a fairly good view of the track is obtained in either direction, but it seems there will be this frightful harvest of death as long as the grade crossing is permitted, for there will always be careless drivers, who will disregard all stop signs, and to whom the slogan of Stop! Look! and Listen! means nothing whatever.

The only way to prevent such frightful accidents is to do away with the grade crossing. Happily this is being done by the highway department wherever possible. May the day be not far distant when a grade railroad crossing will be unknown.

When Trouble Comes

It is remarkable how trouble can pursue a man and his family. The usual thing is sickness or accident and it seems that one case invites another.

It reminds one of the time the late Judge Hale of Deerwood was interviewed regarding a depression in the mining industry. "The bottom has not been reached," said the judge, "for there is no telling how many sub-basements there are."

About all a man can do when sickness and misery assail is to bear a stiff upper lip and fight it through.

Salesmanship Too Aggressive

NEWSBOYS and little girls selling papers, eager to dispose of them, are becoming too aggressive in their salesmanship. The average tourist coming to town is assailed by a flock on either side of his car and it has been a miracle that one or more of the eager boys and girls have not been run down.

Our streets are crowded with cars as it is and to add pedestrians in the shape of scurrying newsboys is enough to tax the nerves of any motorist.

PRESIDENT RYAN's communication in another column telling of the activity of the Chamber of Commerce and Representative Opsahl in trying to secure the paving of Highway No. 2 is very gratifying, and it is to be hoped that his statement that Commissioner Babcock will begin work on it this fall will be realized. It certainly is a much deserved and much needed improvement.

By LEETE STONE

KATIE CLANCY was a waitress at a business lunch establishment in the downtown district. Her face was as wholesome and fresh as her apron and her heart was as generous as sunshine. During four years' employment at Jiggs' serving beans, buns and butter cakes to keen appetites, Katie had acquired a fair clientele—people who liked to sit at her table, attracted by her pleasant personality. They tipped regularly, so that, all in all, Katie was content.

Among her "regulars" was a forlorn woman whose order was nearly always spice cakes and coffee. This sparsely built woman was shabby, but neat, evidently a routine worker of some sort at small pay. She never failed to leave a nickel for Katie under the edge of her plate.

Another of Katie's friends, of the male persuasion, usually took the seat next the spice cake and coffee woman. His hair was one-third and his order varied, but it always included a currant bun. In fact, his face resembled a currant bun with its small, shifty eyes, hardly larger than currants.

Certainly not to be passed over was the floor manager, Clarence Dill, whose brown suit fitted across the back and shoulders in a way that made the pretty waitresses and the stenographers in all-but-seal coats sigh softly as Clarence strode up and down the lunch palace.

Almost anyone of the girls at Jiggs', and many of its fair patrons, would have welcomed a closer acquaintance with the manager than that afforded by seeing him stroll in and out among the onyx pillars of the restaurant; but fate had directed the name of Clarence's adoration on the only feminine creature there who kept her eyes on the stew she served, never glancing at the fit of his coat or the poise of his well-shaped head—namely, Katie Clancy.

Clarence Dill went almost to extremes in his desire to obtain Katie's regard; such as wiping up coffee spilled on her table, which, of course, was obviously her duty. And he ordered the butter-cake chef in sharp tones to serve hot cakes to Katie instead of those done and laid in the warming pan. All unnoticed!

But fate was even more cruel; for as the days passed Clarence could not help seeing that the man with the currant-seed eyes was making a definite impression on Katie. Else why did she give him two pats of butter always, and two plicherettes of sirup with his cakes?

The creature leered rapidly at Katie; but she, bless her heart, was no psychologist. She simply thought he was trying to be pleasant, and rewarded him with an extra size baked apple. All this was exceedingly trying for Clarence Dill; but even he had to admit that the man was generous in the matter of tips; that is, for a place like Jiggs'. The man nearly always left a dime.

Clarence crushed his rage under an exterior of unbroken calm as he watched Katie smile a warm thanks for this bounty, vowing that he would find a way to win his wish. On a certain unforgettable day Clarence was watching the man he considered a serious rival with the usual distaste in his eyes. The forlorn-looking spice-cake-and-coffee woman had just left her nickel and gone, Katie, standing near, had turned her back to the little man. Surprisedly he reached over and slid the next door nickel under his own plate, a lunch-room crime that is ink black in its dishonor.

Clarence Dill almost walked into an onyx pillar with delight at the discovery; he knew it would happen again and the denouement he planned was perfect. Sure enough, the heinous breach of etiquette occurred next day after the spice cake and coffee woman had gone.

The third day Clarence stood almost within arm's length of the man and pretended not to be watching him. His sleuth's training made this easy to do. Kitty was polishing the white marble of the next table, also very near.

Again the covert gesture; but this time the currant-eyed man got the surprise of his life. A long, brown-clad arm slid over his shoulder, and the whole hand with the stolen nickel was pinioned to the table midway between the two plates.

"Come here, Katie," Clarence said, "and see where your nickel comes from." And he shook the coin free from the clutching thumb and forefinger.

Katie's eyes registered first astonishment, then admiration, and Clarence knew he had won. Drawing himself to his full six feet, he bent a look of dire scorn on the man, who had wilted completely.

"Pay your check and get out! I've watched you slip the lady's nickel over to your plate for three days now. And don't bother to come back."

Katie confessed that night to Clarence during the intermission of the show at the Palace that she had always—that is, for some time, anyway—well, she had—er—pretended not to notice him at the Lunch Palace of Jiggs' because it did not seem as if she ought to—well—to show her real feelings—"you know what I mean, Clarence."

"O. K., girlie!" And his arm stole reverently along the back of Katie's seat when the lights went off again.

A New Door needed on the Back Porch

The Back Door looks a little neglected, doesn't it? For one thing, the screening has rusted and fallen away in spots. Doesn't keep the flies out. And the delivery boys and the ice man have soiled the woodwork. It does look mussy. It isn't much of a job to put in new netting and to paint the main door and the frame of the other. Let's get busy. What do you say?

BOXING TO HAVE ITS CZAR SOON, JUST LIKE BASEBALL

WE'LL PLAY OUR BEST TO BEAT WALKER, SAYS PETE

HAVE SUPREME AUTHORITY OVER FISTIC INDUSTRY

NEW YORK STATE ATHLETIC COMMISSION NOW SENDING OUT FEELERS

AGREEMENT MAY SOON BE REACHED APPOINTING RULES IN CAULIFLOWER PROFESSION

By FRANK GETTY
United Press Sports Editor
(Copyright 1929, by United Press)

New York, July 13.—(U.P.)—A boxing commissioner, to have supreme authority over the fistic industry similar to that exercised over baseball by Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, will be appointed before the end of the present year.

The New York State athletic commission, which controls boxing in this state, is sending out feelers to commissions in other states where boxing is conducted on a large scale, and there is little doubt that agreement will be reached upon the appointment of a ruler of the cauliflower profession.

No attempt will be made to establish the commissioner in a national capacity. He will be recognized by those states in which boxing flourishes, such as New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Illinois and Michigan.

No better move could have been made to stabilize the business of fist-cuffs. It represents a concession on the part of the New York commission, which has advanced the proposition. It may well prove to be the most important step yet taken in the advancement of boxing.

The current complications in the heavyweight division were responsible for the decision of place boxing under the control of a high commissioner. W. E. Cassy, president of Madison Square Garden, is the man who advanced the suggestion, which was adopted Friday by the New York commission.

The case of Max Schmeling, recognized as the outstanding heavyweight contender, yet under suspension in New York State because of his refusal to engage in a match with Phil Scott of England, arranged by a manager the German boxer disowns, precipitated the decision to ask the boxing commissions of several states to get together and agree upon a "Judge Landis."

Carey and his confederates in the Madison Square Garden corporation had intended to match Schmeling with Jack Sharkey of Boston in September, the winner to be recognized as the new heavyweight champion. The New York commission suspended Schmeling, ending all chance of such a bout being held here.

The question then arose: Should Carey and his associates carry their good will for the New York commission to the point of quiescence, and decline to promote a Sharkey-Schmeling fight in some other state?

Carey conferred with the New York State athletic commission Friday incorporated in some state other than New York, will promote a heavy weight bout between the German and the Lithuanian this fall.

Probably the bout will be held in Detroit. Carey is not giving out his plan for the moment. The main thing is that he is going to promote the affair outside New York.

Madison Square Garden, therefore, will promote the fight which probably will lead to the crowning of a new heavyweight champion, successor to Gene Tunney.

Since it obviously is impossible for a supreme high commissioner of boxing to be agreed upon and appointed by the interested states before September, the new "czar" will come as a secondary, but most important step, following the election of a new heavyweight title holder.

Fights July 18

Young Stribling, who will box George Cook of Australia at Kansas City on July 18.

Ancients Excelled in

Art of Glass Staining

The medieval artists in stained glass toiled like jewelers setting diamonds and rubies. Their ideal was not a pretty picture made transparent, but a window made beautiful. Years of experimenting with various combinations of glass taught them secrets of design which resulted in windows that have never been surpassed.

Glass staining and glass painting are two quite different things. One method is to build up a mosaic of pieces of glass, colored not only on its surface but its very substance. The other is to paint the design upon white or colored glass.

It was in glass making that the ancients excelled. The blue of one school was so vibrant that the workers ground down sapphires to obtain their magic color. The fancy, although popular, is probably fallacious. Nevertheless, the colors of the ancients were so expertly compounded that they blended into a uniform whole in a completed window and never appeared flat or "raw."

The greens, for example, were not a straight mixture of blue and yellow, but a combination of blue and red and yellow in such proportions that they did not fuse into adjoining blues at a distance as do modern blue-and-yellow greens. The reds likewise were distinctive, as they contained alternating layers of red, and green-white gave a mellow softness to light before it reached the eye of the beholder.

But Do We Know It?

Light-Heavy Title May Shift

If determination in training means anything when the boys get into the ring, you'll see plenty of action when James Braddock, right, of Jersey City, N. J., tries to knock Tommy Loughran's, left, light heavyweight crown from the Quaker City boy's dome, at the Yankee Stadium in New York. Many there are who give the Jersey boy the best of the argument and say he can do it. But, don't forget, Tommy is wise in the ways of the ring and keeps a mighty level head on his shoulders, besides being clever with his mitts.

Surely, He's a Smart Jockey!

By QUIN HALL

WHEN Linus "Pony" McAtee kicked Clyde Van Dusen ahead of that big field in the last Kentucky Derby on Churchill Downs at Louisville, Ky., he proved pretty conclusively that he is a smart jockey.

In many quarters there has never been any doubt concerning the McAtee smartness. Horsemen may tell you that Laverne Fator is the best jockey wearing silks today—they may say that Sande was the greatest rider of all time—but they won't object when you start raving about the ability of Pony. They all know that he is a smart pilot.

McAtee proved that smartness at Louisville. Following the announcement that Higo Strung would not be a starter, several owners approached McAtee with offers to ride their entries. He had quite a string of horses to choose from. He picked Clyde Van Dusen as his mount. Van Dusen, according to McAtee's figuring, was a good mud runner. It usually rains on Derby Day. "Pony" put the two ideas together and made his selection. It rained and Clyde made good his reputation in the heavy going.

Another example of the McAtee smartness was exhibited when the horses lined up for the getaway. If memory serves right, Van Dusen was the farthest horse from the pole. If not, then he was next to the last. The start was made in a heavy rain. It seemed to take hours to get away. After the rest of the horses had done their share of making life miserable for the starter, McAtee and Van Dusen started rushing around in the mud and when the start was finally made McAtee had edged his mount down near the center of the line; not a great advantage but, nevertheless, an "edge."

It was rumored that McAtee made the trip from the East to Louisville with no guarantee but his expenses. He went home with a bankroll to add to his other bankrolls.

Jockey Callahan, retired, was one of the best finishers in the game and that old timer now rates McAtee as the best of the lot in that respect.

No longer a youngster, "Pony" plans to branch out as a trainer possibly at the close of the Summer. While most jockeys think a horse is just something to ride, McAtee knows thoroughbreds. He will make a great trainer just as he made a great rider.

AVIATION STARS OF ALL KINDS COMING

Dinner Planned to Show Courtesies to the Many Distinguished Air Men

BOOSTER TOUR ARRANGED

Braierd Ladies' Band Next Week to Visit Towns in 50-Mile Radius of Brainerd

Braierd on Saturday will have the leading figures in aviation represented at the Air Meet opening and it is but proper that they be recognized by some courtesies. The air men will include noted fliers of the Northwest, including army and navy men, airplane manufacturers, air line operators and airplane publications.

Plans are being formulated by Pres. C. A. Ryan of the Chamber of Commerce for a dinner and entertainment for the evening of Saturday, July 20, and in which a number of Brainerd citizens will participate. A rare feature will be the presence of Charles "Speed" Holman at the dinner, a flier who has developed as good a reputation in speaking as in flying.

The city of Brainerd is gaining publicity of immense value from this Brainerd Air Meet. Through the co-operation received by the Lions Club in selecting a young lady to represent Brainerd as "Miss Brainerd" in the personality contest conducted by the Minnesota State Fair Association, which took place last night in the Twin Cities, "Miss Brainerd" was selected in competition with the most beautiful young ladies of the state, and won the title of "Miss Minnesota." The management of the Brainerd Air Meet assisted in every way possible and will also show Miss Anderson courtesies at the Air Meet here.

The Air Meet, which has already developed huge proportions, is sponsored by the Brainerd Ladies' Band, which has demonstrated that it is air minded by undertaking such a great event. It is perhaps the first time that an event of this kind has been sponsored by a ladies' organization. A corps of efficient workers are aiding to work out the details of every feature of the Air Meet to be held in Brainerd.

Next week the Brainerd Ladies' Band will head a booster campaign, spreading the merits of the Brainerd Air Meet among the towns and communities within a radius of 50 miles of Brainerd. This is the first tour of the kind ever attempted and will bring much favorable mention for Brainerd. The band of itself is an attraction, being a prize cup winner at the State Band Contest held in St. Paul and recently completing a week's engagement at the Northwest Fair held in Minot, N. D. The band will make its first public appearance in Brainerd in its new uniforms of white and scarlet satin, at Rosko Field during the Air Meet.

END OF DEATHS FROM CONTAGION FORESEEN

Future Generations to Be Immune From Germs.

Paris.—The day may be approaching when mankind can be immunized from all contagious maladies, and causes of death can be reduced to old age, the wearing out of organs or accidents.

Science already has means of preventing four of the gravest diseases which have caused serious ravages throughout history and in France alone hundreds of scientists are continuing their studies to provide vaccines to immunize mankind against all the other ills to which we have been heir.

The Pasteur Institute, the Curie Institute and the Academy of Medicine are all centering their efforts on finding vaccines, and at present the greatest attention is being paid the anti-tuberculosis vaccine of Calmette.

Smallpox Scare.

Already vaccination against smallpox, diphtheria, typhoid, and paratyphoid fevers has proved successful. Science is divided over the merits of the tuberculosis vaccine, which is now being widely used in France, and it will be necessary to wait for the results of the next ten years before science can say definitely whether the Calmette vaccine is a preventive or a danger.

The recent smallpox scare in Europe which followed the transport of the disease from India to England by passengers and crews on liners caused a sudden increase in vaccinations which almost taxed to its limit the production capacity of the Pasteur Institute.

Modern engineering has come to the aid of science, however, and by the use of most modern American refrigeration machinery and methods, it is now possible to make up serums in vast quantities and store them away to be ready for such an emergency as that created by the British smallpox scare.

World Is Prepared.

Professor Lereboullet of the French Academy of Medicine, one of the outstanding authorities on vaccination in Europe, said that the world is today perfectly prepared to fight against epidemics and many contagious diseases could be forever eliminated if all nations would adopt the successfully proven methods.

"Smallpox has entirely disappeared as an epidemic in France, although there are rare scattered cases, especially in port towns," Professor Lereboullet said.

"Every year sees several hundred thousand persons vaccinated against smallpox in France, especially school children, soldiers and people living in cities who are most subject to contagion. Our vaccination work has been so successful and the public has accepted it so heartily that today it is safe to say France has no fears of smallpox."

"Similar campaigns to encourage vaccination against diphtheria have had good results. A half million children are vaccinated against this disease annually with the result that it has almost disappeared in our hospitals. We will continue until the entire French youth, about 8,000,000 children, is immune.

"The anti-typhoid vaccine has now been proven successful, and already hundreds of thousands of persons voluntarily seek immunization annually. The Calmette vaccine against tuberculosis can be said to be still in a stage of observation, but we have seen only good results so far and 200,000 children are vaccinated annually."

Volcanic Lure

The reason for the return of farmers to dangerous slopes of volcanoes is explained by Dr. Henry S. Washington of Carnegie Institute by the fact that the lava flows are the best vineyard soil on earth. Most of the best grapes are grown on lava soil in areas surrounding long extinct volcanoes and sometimes, as on Mount Etna, around mountains which occasionally grow violent.

Paper Wheels Not in Use

It is about 60 years since compressed paper wheels were used for railroad cars; they were discontinued with the advent of improved steel and iron wheels and heavier equipment.

With a Flapper's Soul

By CORONA REMINGTON

(Copyright.)

ELSIE DUGAN screwed her face up into a knot and glared at her reflection in the mirror. With the palm of her hand she slapped the smooth surface of the glass once, twice, three times.

"There! Take that and that and that!" she said, then crumpled up into a little heap and burst into tears. "Oh, Lord, why did you make me so ugly and then give me a flapper's soul?" she moaned.

Ordinarily Elsie was a cheerful, easy-going little Irish girl, but upon certain occasions all the rebellion in her nature flared up and she indulged in an orgy of despair.

Suddenly she rose from the bed and ripped off her flimsy little evening dress. Rolling it ruthlessly into a ball, she threw it in the corner of the room.

"And it took a whole month's salary to buy it! If you aren't a flapper, don't try to flap," she grimly advised herself.

Then she walked across the room, recovered the poor little bit of green chiffon and taffeta and started smoothing it out.

"It wasn't your fault. You tried to make me popular and make those silly fool men see me and dance with me—but it was too big a job for one little green dress."

"But it's all off, little flapper frock, we won't go to any more dances or parties or anything. We'll go to church and Sunday school and the rest of the time we'll stay right here at home and we won't try to compete with a whole bunch of bobbed-haired beauties who know this flapping game. Painfully practical, that's what I am—out to marry a middle-aged farmer with half a dozen savage kids left him by his first wife. Ugh!"

It was late the next afternoon that Frank Faulkner sauntered into her office.

"Hello, Elsie," he greeted with all the familiarity one employee has for another. "Saw you at the dance last night."

Elsie flushed scarlet and looked down at her typewriter, then up again. "Yes, I had a beast of a time. I'm not cut out for social things. I'm off it all forever."

"That's tough luck for me. I just came in to ask you to go to dinner with me tonight and we could take in a show afterward. Wish you could, Elsie."

"Well, that's different," she told him. "I'd love to go if you want me, but I'm just not going to any more parties and dances."

"Good. I thought you'd go with me. I'll wear my evening suit, if you say. I don't get many chances. And we'll go to a sure enough hotel and make believe we're big folk."

They laughed together happily. "I think that would be great and I'll wear my little green dress."

At six o'clock Elsie went down in answer to the doorbell and found her escort waiting for her.

"Isn't this fun?" she said, her whole face lighted with happiness. "and oh, a taxi! You extravagant thing!"

"I know, but this is our night." He helped her in with all the flattering deference of a real gallant and her heart jumped at the attention.

"I feel like a princess," she laughed. It was a gay dinner. They laughed and chatted and joked and teased and felt like children playing grownup.

Afterward as he helped her on with her wrap he said in boyish tones: "How would you like to drive out to the park and sit around the lake instead of going to a show?"

"I'd love it," Elsie declared. "I wanted to suggest it, but was afraid you might have had your heart set on some particular show."

In the park by the lake it was cool and quiet. The moon hanging over the water threw a soft light over all.

"You know, Elsie, I've got a lot I've wanted to tell you for ages. I've had a disappointing sort of a time. I'm only a bookkeeper, but I'm learning the cost of things and saving a little money and some day I'm going to start out on my own. I adore your red hair and your little fiery temper and your loyalty. If you could love a fellow just a little bit and let him be perfectly silly and write you wild love letters and write him some back and then marry him after a while—why—why, you're trembling. Surely I didn't frighten you, dear."

"No, no," she murmured. "Just make wild love to me; do, Frankie. I've got a flapper's soul, but dreadfully humdrum, practical outside, and I've longed for—oh, do keep on saying wonderful, loving, crazy things to me!"

"We've needed each other right along," he said a while later. "If I'd only had the courage sooner, but it gave me a little nerve when I saw you didn't have such a good time last night. I thought maybe you weren't so dreadfully spoiled after all. You might appreciate a fellow a little, and besides you were so adorable in that green dress I couldn't wait any longer to know my fate."

"And just to think I was so angry at the dress and the dull evening I had and everything," sighed Elsie. "Now I love all the men I hated last night for not dancing with me."

"Well, don't love them too much or I might be jealous," she laughed. "All right, I won't," she promised, happily.

The Sheriff's Prisoner

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(Copyright.)

THE new sheriff of Armadillo county was looking for a thief, the one who had broken into the schoolhouse and stolen several things belonging to pupils and to Link Larrabee, the school teacher. And so John Wayne, one of the trustees, had called on the sheriff and in his close-mouthed way vouched the information that it would be well to keep an eye on the schoolhouse.

And the first moment that Sheriff Harry Gray turned a pair of handsome, though honest, blue eyes toward the schoolhouse he scented a clew. Presently he heard footsteps on the bare boards inside, the door opened wider and a big girl stepped out, closing the door softly and locking it.

On her arm she carried some clothing, one or two coats and a bright wool cap.

She glanced hurriedly around, listened for an instant and then darted around the building and took the trail that led back through the trees toward the river.

The sheriff smiled, grimly, and shook his head. He was a very young sheriff, and it had not been so many years since he had attended that little schoolhouse himself.

"Gee, it's my luck to have to catch a girl, first throw," he grumbled as he mounted his horse and started up the trail after the girl. "She's a mighty pretty one at that—hair like bronze, and some color! What's she doing with a bunch of old rags—hey!" he called abruptly as she stood aside to let him pass.

"Well?" she asked coolly, but he saw the scared look in her eyes and hated himself.

"Where you going with all those clothes and things out of the schoolhouse?"

"You want these?" she asked, amazingly, holding them out.

He took them from her willing hands, placing them awkwardly across his saddle bow. "I'm right sorry to have to do this."

"If you have what you want you had better ride on," she said, stepping back.

"I don't know but what I shall take you along, miss," he said gravely. "Take me?" There was terror in her voice.

"Yes'm, I should arrest you."

"You? Arrest me?" He was surprised to see that she was holding a little blue-steel weapon in her right hand.

"Got me covered, eh?" he laughed, but his eyes did not laugh.

"Well, are you coming with me?" he asked after another moment.

"No."

"You're under arrest, ma'am."

She frowned a little and then smiled in a friendly way that delighted him. He asked himself why the smile of a mere girl—a girl he was taking to jail, too—should set his heart to galloping.

"Yes, I remember that. I will walk beside you if you don't mind."

He slipped to the ground and tendered his mount. "It's some little ride, miss," he insisted.

Presently she consented, and he lifted her into the big saddle.

"Do you know Mr. Wayne?" he asked after they had traveled awhile.

She hesitated. "You mean the school trustee?"

"That's right. I'm taking you to his place, Flat Hills. He sent me to catch somebody who was robbing the schoolhouse, and, worse luck, I found you right away, so you've got to see the old gentleman, and if he says lock-up, why I'll be hanged if I take you there."

"That's good of you!" she said gratefully.

"You can't be from Armadillo county; you wouldn't hold on to a saddle that way," he told her.

"What way would you hold it?" she asked demurely.

"Not at all. Armadillo girls ride like little squaws. Here's old Wayne's place now. If you don't try to squirm out of it, miss, I'll do the best I can for you, but you better come clean and tell me the whole thing," he pleaded earnestly.

She bent her head and smiled, then she lifted it proudly. "I'm not trying to squirm out of anything. It is simple. I left some things in the schoolhouse—in fact, my trunk was left there by mistake and I couldn't get anyone to take it to the ranch, so I needed some clothes and I went down and took them out of my trunk. Some one will come for my trunk tomorrow, and now—" She smiled at him wickedly.

"Who are you?" he asked abruptly. "The new school teacher—stopping at Mr. Wayne's, if you please, Mr. Sheriff, and now that we are here, may I have my things? And oh, thank you!"

She watched him ride away, admiring the swaying grace of horse, and rider. "He said he was sorry," she smiled to herself. "I know he isn't sorry, and I am glad, but I was afraid at first. I thought he was a real bandit." She leaned against the post and laughed helplessly.

"You seem mighty happy," grunted Mr. Wayne as he loped across the yard.

"I'm going to be," she ventured daringly. For once their eyes had met and clung, and she knew he would come riding back again, and yet again.

SICK MOTHER VIEWS KIN KILLED BY TRAIN

Four Dead From Electric Train-Car
Crash Identified as Grove
City People

FATHER, THREE CHILDREN

Mother, Patient at Walker Sanatorium and Five Children Mourn
Tragic Death

A woman of slight build, ill, her health despaired of, gazed with glazed eyes at the inert disfigured features of her loved husband and three small children today in a Brainerd mortuary—the toll of a horrible railway crossing accident yesterday afternoon.

The lives taken in the Minnesota and International Railway electric train and car crash at the crossing on Highway No. 2, one and one half miles west of the city were those of the following, identified by relatives late yesterday:

Charles Berg, 55, Grove City, Minn., farmer.

His three children, Carl, 3, Jane, 5, and Segrud, 13.

The woman, Mrs. Berg, arrived in the city today noon from the Walker Sanatorium, accompanied by a nurse and an official of the sanatorium. She was given a permit for one week from the sanatorium where she is a patient fighting the ravages of disease to attend the funeral rites of her husband and three children to be held at Grove City Monday.

The news of the tragedy was broken gradually to the sick mother at Walker yesterday. She found it difficult to believe, sobbing convulsively that it could not be so as she had seen her husband and children only that morning. Brothers of her deceased husband supported her as she walked to the caskets of the four, three of smaller length than the one for Mr. Berg.

The "death crossing" accident yesterday was the most serious of crossing accidents in the vicinity of Brainerd in years. It snuffed out the lives of four members of one family, leaving a sick mother in a sanatorium and five other children on the family farm near Grove City. The five children will be cared for by relatives.

Coroner D. E. Whitney upon investigation of the accident reported this morning that he considered an inquest unnecessary as the cause of death was plainly established.

He reported that Engineer Dan McGaffigan at the controls of the electric train stated to him that he sounded the horn twice while approaching the crossing.

McGaffigan corrected the report rener, was running the train at a speed of between 25 and 30 miles an hour. He said he noticed the car driven by Berg approximately 300 feet from the crossing and believed that Berg would stop the car when he heard the horn. He estimated Berg's speed at 12 miles an hour.

McGaffigan corrected the report received by Coroner Whitney that Berg had just passed another car on the road with the statement that Berg's car was travelling in a straight line for the crossing and that while there were other cars on the highway approaching the crossing there were none directly behind him.

The engineer who is one of the M. and I.'s oldest engineers in service here applied the air immediately when the collision happened, he said.

The car, a 1925 model Ford, the property of P. B. Olson's, Grove City, brother of Berg, was pushed a distance estimated at approximately 600 feet north on the track.

The car in which the four were returning to Grove City after visiting Mrs. Berg who has been a patient at the Walker Sanatorium for the past month was completely demolished. The car was literally flattened out.

Berg and his three children were crushed by the impact. It was believed they died instantly.

Engineer McGaffigan was to make an official report to the railway officials here this afternoon.

The bodies of the four were to be taken this evening to Grove City for burial.

Mr. Berg was one of a family of four sons and five daughters. His mother Mrs. Ole Berg resides at Grove City. Surviving brothers and sisters are: Mrs. Ada Bane, Mrs. Clarence Lawson, P. B. Olson, Grove City; Mrs. Wm. Rosebarger, Mrs. Murton Rhodes, Otto Berg, Andrew Berg, Litchfield; Mrs. Tom Reed, Paynesville.

Authorities were unable to locate the relatives of the deceased for several hours after the accident yesterday due to a misunderstanding in the checking of the license plate on the car.

The car which was believed for three hours to have been the property of a Laporte, Minn., section man turned out to be that of Mr. Olson of Grove City.

Authorities were hindered in their work at the scene of the accident by hundreds of people crowding the bodies and wreckage and scores of cars tying up traffic on the highway.

A man said to be from Hackensack was to be questioned at Little Falls this afternoon concerning what he knows about the accident. He is reported to have stated that he had stopped a short distance before the tracks and that Berg passed him and was struck before his eyes.

Chamber Urges Paving Trunk Highway No. 2

Dear Editor:

In your issue of Tuesday there appeared an editorial concerning the necessity of paving Highway No. 2. You gave it all the appearances of a great discovery and ended with the statement: "Let us hope the Chamber of Commerce and the City Council will get busy at once." Insofar as the Chamber of Commerce is concerned, I believe it requires an answer.

If your newspaper had been represented at Chamber of Commerce meetings, you would never have written the editorial for you would know that the Chamber has been actively engaged in endeavoring to bring about the improvement of Highway No. 2 between the Range and Brainerd since as far back as 1923. You would also know that not less than three resolutions on the matter have been passed and sent to Commissioner Babcock. You would know that Mr. Babcock's very good reason for inactivity on this piece of road was the lack of funds and that this difficulty was removed by the last legislature. You would further know that the Chamber, through the wise and energetic work of our capable representative, A. M. Opsahl, obtained a definite commitment from Mr. Babcock during the last session of the legislature to the effect that the contract for the improvement of No. 2 between the Range and Brainerd would be let this year. Since then, and within the last two weeks, Mr. Opsahl again had this matter up with Mr. Babcock and was again assured that the contract would be let this fall. The Northeast Improvement League, as well as the Chamber of Commerce, have been active in this matter and in touch with Mr. Opsahl and Mr. Babcock looking to early action on this road.

I merely call your attention to these things, believing that, as it is apparently news to you, it might possibly be news to some of your readers. The Chamber of Commerce has troubles and work enough without discovering things to "get busy" on that are already taken care of as far as is humanly possible.

C. A. RYAN,

President, Chamber of Commerce.

Russian Woman "Goes Tropical" In Jungle Film

What Africa's strange and mystic spell can do to a white woman who goes to live in the torrid jungle region is shown in "A Dangerous Woman" with Bacanova in the title role, at the Peoples theatre, Crosby, Sunday and Monday, also all talking comedy. As the wife of Clive Brook, British colonial representative in the primeval land of aboriginal Negro tribes, Bacanova is cast in a part which gives her full opportunity to provide that spell-binding, artistic acting which has made her famous as the talking screen's most exotic siren.

As the plot develops we find her a huntress of men who is seemingly as merciless as the lions that prowl the Congo country. The climax of her romantic stalking of human prey is vivid, tumultuous—it leaves a definite imprint of amazement upon the audience.

Through the medium of sound the genuine language of the jungle tribes—Swahili—is brought to the ears of an audience for the first time in history.

The Skyscraper Murder

by SAMUEL SPEWACK

DWELLERS in big cities go from one mystery to another these days. Crimes are committed, men and women are killed in apparently the most open fashion and frequently that is the last heard of it. Of course, there is an investigation—there is always that. Then, after the customary seven days allotted to wonders, the whole thing drops out of sight.

But not so with the Skyscraper Murder. Here is one that was run to earth and in the process the delvers into the mystery are given plenty of thrills.

Mr. Spewack is a master hand at depicting situations of this sort. Obviously the story is fiction but perhaps there will be those who can see in it a marked resemblance to actuality.

There is a thrill a day in the Skyscraper Murder.

CHAPTER I. A DIVORCE PARTY.

MIDNIGHT at the Club New York, and Lucy Lally, a genial of hostesses, prepared to welcome her gullible guests. A word with the head waiter, a word with her chef, a word with Lucy Lally's Jazz Harmonists, two words with her bartender and wine steward, and three words with her little girls—for these last were the chief attraction of the Club New York, and Lucy knew it.

Lucy was what her patrons called a "hot sketch." A born clown and sycophant, she had won peculiar distinction by confiding in each one of the gaily-seeking guests that they were dukes and she was out to swindle them. This tickled their vanities, and they came back for more. So Lucy watered her champagne and commanded her little girls to supply the necessary "fix" which was cheaper, and as the guests were concerned, more effective. Her profits were so enormous she never combined of the heavy toll of craft paid to enforcement officers. The Club New York, in consequence, was never raided and the guests feared no sudden and sometimes unwelcome notoriety. And Lucy grew rich and fat.

You could find at Lucy's a sociological cross-section of New York: debutantes and demimondaines, bankers and bootleggers, and buyers, thieves, actors, screen deities, panderers, pick-pockets and a goodly number of stupid but otherwise harmless bourgeoisie who looked at Lucy as they looked at their books, plays, newspapers and love affairs—as a source of color to singularly colorless lives.

And Lucy went from one to the other, back-slapping and hand shaking, surveying each one with her shrewd blue eyes, laughing constantly in overflowing good nature, and calling for cheers, applause and noisy merriment until the dawn.

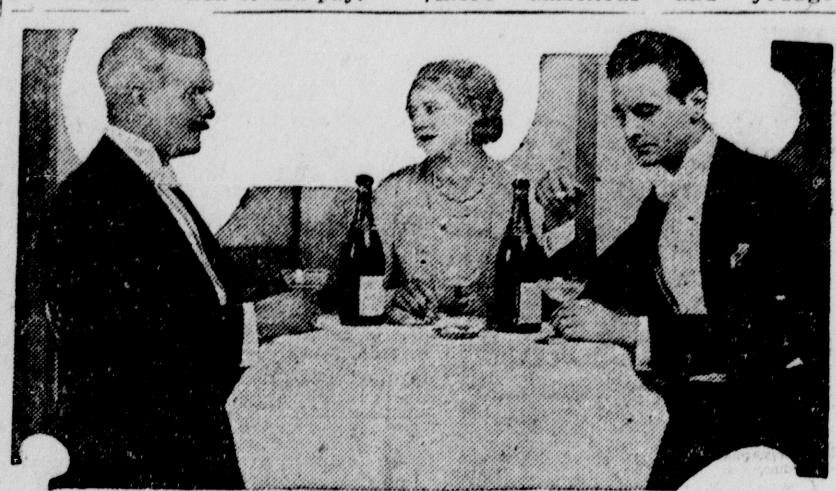

At 1 a. m. you could hear Lucy's guffaws above the rhythmic wailing of the band. It was then she presented her dancing girls, whom she underpaid and overworked, and with whom gentlemen could sit at tables for the price of a hundred-dollar bill and feel they were very good indeed.

On this particular morning Lucy was in better form than ever. She had an eye to the piquant and the news had reached her that an extraordinary spectacle—extraordinary even for the Club New York—would be unfolded at one of her treasure tables. Any moment now she expected the principal players. She awaited them eagerly.

It was not every day that a young society woman, her husband but recently divorced, and an elderly roue who was the main cause of the divorce would foregather at the Club New York and celebrate the event together. It was to be a merry party of three.

Only one factor spoiled Lucy's anticipation. She had been explicitly warned to keep the reason of the meeting secret. She could see the commercial value of whispering the joyous news to her grateful guests. It would be a bigger event in the lives of the dubs than anything she herself could plan. And she would have enjoyed the telling. But Lucy knew when it paid to keep a secret. And this, decidedly, was one occasion when it did pay.

The Three Seemed Oblivious to the Whispering, Although They Must Have Felt They Were Being Talked About. Perhaps They Were Absorbed in Their Own Bizarre Conversation.

Now the guests were coming in singly, in pairs and in parties of six. Lucy called them by name so all should hear and the guests strove to maintain that easy nonchalance of celebrities accustomed to being pointed out in the thoroughfares. And most of them were celebrities only to their stenographers—and some to the stenographer's experts. The common denominator of Lucy's mixed society was the dinner table.

"Howza boy!" Lucy guffawed. "Hello, honey." "Why, Mrs. Van Swinitholton! So glad to see you (this to a grisette who had married a young college rounder and had been paid off liberally). And Jimmy! (who was a buyer and knew his New York). 'How's every little thing? That's good. Coming back to get gypped proper? Oh—excuse me!"

Lucy hurried down the corridor leading to the cloak room, for her quick eye had caught the eagerly waiting three-some. She paused before them, beaming.

"Well," she boomed. "This is—Oliver Sewell smiled slightly. "Lucy," he said, "this is Mrs. Edison . . . and . . . Mr. Edison. Neither of them, I believe, has been here before."

"But I've heard lots about you," Mrs. Edison confided. Her divorced husband merely bowed. Lucy escorted the three to a table from the orchestra, where they could see without being unduly stared at themselves. She wondered why Mrs. Edison pretended this to be her first visit to the club. Lucy had welcomed her on countless occasions and Mrs. Edison had always come with Sewell. "But what the hell!" mused Lucy. "If a woman wants to lie to her husband even after they get divorced, it's none of my business."

And she guffawed as she seated them, and sent the waiter scurrying for the watered champagne. Lucy had seated a strange triangle. The guests who marked them saw an elderly red-haired individual, probably in his young woman and a young woman and a young man. The young woman had a hair, rather expressive brown eyes and full, petulant lips. Her complexion was well made, smoked incessantly one gold cigarette after another, and smile was mechanical, except she looked at the older man even the most casual observer see she was infatuated with. And the casual observer would wonder why.

Fully thirty years older than the woman, rumor insisted the red hair was part of a wig, and rumor was quite correct. And if this did not lend sufficient of the burlesque to the strange passion, the white even teeth, which he took out every night and put in a glass of water, capped the comedy. And yet this man was credited with more conquests of silly women than the more ambitious and younger blades in the room. He was slight of build. His eyes were of a hard calculating gray. Only his hands were interesting; long, white, with very quick fingers. The casual spectator would be still more puzzled after studying the young divorced husband, who now engaged in carefully casual conversation with his former wife and her admirer. He looked as if he had lived outdoors a good bit, for his skin was sun-browned, and his eyes clear. His features were regular, almost handsome, and were moved with supple grace. There was a healthy, normal quality about him that was in contrast with the decadence of his companions. You would put him down as a likeable young man, perhaps not overly brilliant, but trustworthy. Now he showed a curiously preoccupied manner that he sought to cover with simulated gaiety, and not very successfully. His careless attitude towards his companions, you sensed, was a strain he could not quite carry off.

Of the three, Sewell was best known to those who came to the Club New York to feast on celebrities. Hardly had he been seated, when the whispering began. "There—that's Sewell! My dear, why you know—the Bridge King. No, he doesn't build them. He teaches bridge. . . . The very best player. His fees are simply terrible. He's written a book. It's a classic. Sewell on Bridge. Women? Well, I don't know what they see in him, I'm sure, but they SAY. . . . That's Mrs. Edison. . . . I can tell from her pictures. . . . Oh, the Edisons have oodles of money. . . . No, I don't know who that is."

THE three seemed oblivious to the whispering, although they must have felt they were being talked about. Perhaps they were too absorbed in their own bizarre conversation.

A Matter of Duty

By R. RAY BAKER

(Copyright.)

ALICE TROVER'S heart was heavy as she turned from the window where, shielded by a curtain, she had watched Henry Gordon disappear round a corner of the street.

She dropped into a chair and picking up a magazine she turned to the back and absently began reading an advertisement in colors.

"Discovered! The Elixir of Youth!" ran the headline of the advertisement in bright red letters. And a subtitle below it was:

"Why Have Wrinkles? Use Sylvia Hall's Carmine Cold Cream and Banish Signs of Age and Worry."

Then there were two pictures, one of a woman who might be about eighty-five years old, and the other a girl of perhaps sixteen. On perusing further Alice discovered that the two persons were one and the same, the first being "before" and the other "after" using the wonderful "Carmine Cold Cream."

Alice discarded the magazine and smiled bitterly. "Perhaps I had better invest in some of that," she mused. "I'll be looking like a hundred years old if this ordeal doesn't end pretty soon. Why can't I muster enough courage to do my duty to Henry and myself?"

The "ordure" in question began two weeks ago, when Alice first saw Henry with another woman.

She waited for Henry to speak of the matter, but he did not mention it. Inasmuch as he had been engaged to Alice for a year, it would have been the proper thing for him to explain himself, she thought.

Alice was willing to let it drop, only the very next day Jennie Quaites, who worked with her in the shoe manufacturer's office, came to her with a story of having seen Henry with "a very stylishly dressed young woman" at a matinee. Soon after other friends were kind enough to inform her of episodes of a similar nature, and finally Alice again saw the pair herself at the restaurant.

Finally, in desperation, Alice sought the advice of her aunt who was versed in matters of the heart, having had three husbands and survived them all. She found her aunt performing her toilet and making profuse use of some crimson, pasty substance which she took from a large jar.

"Making myself young again," explained the aunt, rubbing the oily substance into her face. "This is Sylvia Hall's Carmine Cream, which restores youth, banishing old age and wrinkles. You won't know me when I get made up."

She refused to become serious when Alice related her tale of woe.

"There's only one of two things to do," advised the aunt. "Hand him his ring and forget about him, or get busy and bent out this other woman that has stolen his affections."

"But I love him too much to let him go, even though it's my duty," protested Alice.

"Better think it over, then," said the aunt. "You have my advice. Better let him take the initiative, if you can't do it yourself."

"I must, though. It's my plain duty to break off our engagement and let Henry and this other woman enjoy happiness. I'll do it next time I see him."

And Alice took her leave, while her aunt mattered something about "heart affections—rot!" and resumed lathering her face.

While Alice was passing the window, however, the aunt appeared to have been struck with an idea, for she called:

"Alice, I just happened to think of something. Perhaps this other woman is Henry's sister, or cousin, or—or his mother."

"No, it can be," Alice rejoined. "Henry has no sisters or cousins. I know that to be a fact; and his mother is dead."

"Too bad, then. I thought perhaps I'd solved the puzzle. Well, hood-by, and don't lose any sleep and get a lot of worry wrinkles."

At the dinner hour the next day Alice could not keep away from the restaurant where her troubles of the heart had begun. She had no intention of spying, but she simply must know if "that affair" was continuing.

Evidently it was, for through the window Alice saw Henry and the fashionably garbed woman she had almost learned to hate.

"She's a silly looking young thing," the watcher remarked, and started away, determined not to be seen.

But she was seen. Henry spied her as he turned from the cashier's desk.

"Good evening, Alice," he said, doffing his hat and drawing the other woman toward his fiancée.

"Good evening," Alice responded coldly.

"I'd like you to meet a very celebrated lady," Henry went on. "You've read lots about her, no doubt, for her name is in all the magazines. Women are blessing her in every part of the globe for the good service she is performing for them. Alice, this is Sylvia Hall, the inventor and manufacturer of the famous 'Carmine Cream,' that has banished age for so many, including herself. She's a living advertisement of her wares, as you can see for yourself. And," he finished proudly, "she's my only living relative. Alice, my fiancée—my grandmother."

U. S. Largest Maker, User of Chemicals

Washington.—The United States is the world's largest chemical producer and consumer. She exported one-fourth of the chemical products exported by the leading countries of the world in 1928, according to reports recently issued by the Department of Commerce. Germany, the United States, the United Kingdom and France exported chemical products valued at $8,000,000 in 1928, with Germany surpassing all other countries.

The United States leads in exportation of sulphur, phosphate rock, certain prepared medicines, toilet preparations, naval stores and is an important contender for honors in the shipping of sulphur dyes, indigo, zinc and certain specialties. Germany markets one-half, the United States more than two-fifths, the United Kingdom one-quarter and France three-fifths of their respective chemical exports in Europe. Each country has gained in the European trade, according to the report recently issued.

Collegiate Road Trips Help Students' Grades

Des Moines.—Long road trips for college and university athletes improve rather than retard their scholastic standing, in the opinion of Joe Pipal, coach of Occidental college, Los Angeles.

Pipal brought nine men to Des Moines for the Drake relays last month, and in an address to a civic club explained his views.

"Before an athlete can be taken on road trips he must have a scholastic standing of one-fourth better than necessary for home competition with the result he studies harder in order to assure himself a place on the traveling squad," Pipal said. "Also, our students are required to study two hours a day while on trips."
